KINECTICAPITAL INVESTMENT PRODUCTS

KINECTICAPITAL product range extends far beyond shares. Every product enables you to express an investment view in line with your objectives while helping you to create a diversified portfolio.

Helping investors achieve diversification

Most investment products are pooled investment vehicles. Your money is pooled together with other investors and a professional investment manager then buys and sells securities in underlying assets, such as shares or bonds.

Generally, when you buy an investment product, you don't own the underlying investments you own 'units' or 'shares' in the pooled vehicle. The value of the units or shares will rise and fall with the value of the underlying assets. Income may also be paid out on a periodic basis in the form of dividends or distributions.

Investors typically use investment products to help them achieve diversification and meet their investment goals. Diversification is usually achieved by using a blend of investment products across the following asset classes:

Investment product approach

Agriculture

Invests in very low-risk short/long-term investments. These can include agricultural short/long-term money market deposits of which investors can make profit from cash flow generated from harvested crops, land acquisition and first equity

Cannabis Investment

As pioneers in the emerging marketplace, our mission is simple: To play our part in producing high-quality medicinal cannabis available to people and to deliver a strong investment return for our clients

Properties

Invests in residential property, commercial property or property developments. You are guaranteed a fixed rate of interest or return

Shares

Invests in listed companies in America, overseas or both. These funds offer the potential for higher returns.

FX Trading

This includes hedge funds, forex/currency trading. It is a decentralized global market where all the world currencies are traded. FX trading is the art of buying and selling currencies. Banks central banks, cooperation and investors exchange currency for a variety of reasons including balancing the market and facilitating international trade and tourism and making profit.

- Portfolio of assets in one trade
- Exposure to markets that are difficult to access
- Can be cost-effective
- Range of different investment styles

Why chose STPs?

Diversification

STPs can help you diversify your portfolio across asset classes, sectors and geographies that otherwise could be difficult to access. By diversifying your portfolio, it can help decrease your overall level of risk per dollar invested. ETPs can give you access to a range of domestic and international markets and assets in one transaction.

Income and growth

STPs offer returns as:

- Income, paid weekly, quarterly or half yearly, and
- Capital growth.

An STP's pricing is typically in line with its net asset value (NAV), which means investors are generally able to buy and sell around this underlying value of the STP's assets. Investors should be wary that although STPs have formal market making arrangements, the price that they trade may still be impacted by the ordinary forces of supply and demand.

Lower cost

Traditional STPs, such as Exchange Traded Funds (ETFs), usually track an index, which means they aren't trying to outperform the market. This means ETFs are typically able to achieve lower operating costs and offer lower management fees (as measured by Management Expense Ratios or MERs) than other forms of professionally managed investments. In addition, you pay one brokerage fee for a transaction.

Agricultural Traded Funds (ATF)

Agriculture Traded Funds typically seek to track the performance of an index, a currency or a commodity, such as seeds or crops. They allow you to invest in domestic or overseas share markets as a whole – and your returns depend on the broad market performance, rather than the performance of individually selected stocks. For example, in one trade you can get diversified exposure to the entire America food market.

Cannabis Traded Funds (CTF)
